DISCUSSION: The Director, Nebraska Service Center, denied the employment-based immigrant visa petition, which is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a software development and consulting firm. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a senior systems analyst pursuant to sections 203(b)(2) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(2). As required by statute, a labor certification accompanied the petition.

Upon reviewing the petition, the director determined that the petitioner failed to demonstrate that the beneficiary satisfied the minimum level of education stated on the labor certification. The director determined that the beneficiary's academic credentials could not be accepted as that which would qualify her as an advanced degree professional. The AAO issued a request for evidence on February 9, 2011 concerning the actual minimum educational requirements of the proffered position, as well as documentation of the beneficiary's experience and the petitioner's continuing financial ability to pay the proffered wage in view of the multiple petitions filed by the petitioner.<sup>1</sup> The AAO explained that the evidence in the record of proceeding as currently constituted did not support a clear determination of what the actual minimum requirements were as expressed on the labor certification.

In the RFE, the AAO specifically alerted the petitioner that failure to respond to the RFE would result in dismissal since the AAO could not substantively adjudicate the appeal without the information requested. The failure to submit requested evidence that precludes a material line of inquiry shall be grounds for denying the petition. See 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(14).

Because the petitioner failed to respond to the RFE, the AAO is dismissing the appeal.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
